

MOBILE COMPUTER RACKS FOR DEFENCE (C4ISR)

Portable rack platforms
deployable in the world's harshest environments

Computer Racks for C4ISR Applications

Our pre-integrated C4ISR mobile computer racks are specifically designed to perform a range of applications in extreme environments.

Designed to be lightweight but high strength, these portable computer racks can be easily transported and quickly commissioned onsite.

Who We Are

We are a designer and supplier of specialist computing platforms, engineered to meet the exact requirements of any application – irrespective of complexity or environmental demands.

With over 30 years' experience in supplying computer systems to precise specifications across multiple industries, we've designed and integrated racks of all shapes and sizes for deployment in the world's harshest environments.

Beyond The Yellow Line

As more complex computer-based applications are required to venture beyond a benign environment, such as defence equipment, ship machinery and offshore installations – their ability to operate reliably becomes a function of their protection.

To control the external environment in these applications is near impossible. So the more extreme the environment, the more protection is required for computers, especially when they are industrial-grade. That's where we come in.

Our Services & Capabilities

From our expertise in taking commercial components and equipping them to perform in military environments through to our ability to help you stay on top of industry legislation, our rack capabilities and services are in place to help you get the most out your mobile defence application.
